As we perceive, today, in our neoliberal society, we see that neoliberalism is more totalitarian than the ideologies that neoliberalism considers totalitarian, such as fascism and communism. We see the totalitarianism of neoliberalism with the question of the police and justice oppressing anyone who gives their opinion, while rich and neoliberal people can give their opinions and discriminate against people at will, as we see in games and in the media out there.

Not only the question of games and the media, we also see politicians with extremist speeches not being punished and that the police and justice turn a blind eye to them. That is why it is necessary to revolutionize the judicial system in a socialist society, replacing the police with popular militias, which serve the population and help the population, and do not oppress the population and protect the wealthier, as well as a ruled judicial system. in empathy and in seeking to help the other, and not to punish or destroy the other, this in most cases.

Another important issue to be dealt with is the issue of prisons, prisons in neoliberalism are really horrible, they do not respect human rights, they place people who are imprisoned for banal reasons that are in the penal code, with extremely dangerous prisoners, among other things, besides being just more like “concentration camps made out of concrete” than something to re-educate people.

Therefore, from the need to replace prisons with re-education centers, where prisoners are re-educated, this in most cases, there is also the isolation of the extremely dangerous from others, and thus creating a re-education regime that is much more human and empathic, in addition to enabling people to become more human and more empathic.
